ME Edward Beart, one of the oldest and best known residents of this Colony, took his departure from here this afternoon is the steamer Oceanic for Japan, in which country he intends to settle down. During his stay here, Mr Beart has taken an active and prominent part in all matters connected with the social life of the place, notably in boating and dramatic affairs. In his earlier days, he was one of the first to give an impetus to boating, and as a 'coach' h was for some time unrivalled. Of la years, he has confined his attention in acquatic matters almost exclusively to yachting and sailing, and at the regattas he has either officiated as judge or starter. It was in dramatic affairs, however, that 848 Mr Beart concerned himself most, an also distinguished himself most. With the exception of Mr A. Coxon (Mr Hockey) who, by the way, proceeds on a trip by the same steamer, Mr Beart has done more for the Hongkong stage than any other gentleman connected witl

it. The list of characters which he has personated successfully is an extremely lengthy one, and we do not remember to representation of any which he has at Yokohama Time-4th instant. (Counsel tempted. Mr Beart was one of the leading spirits in promoting and carrying on the China Pench, published in Hongkong for some years during the '60's He had been for many years secretary to the Hongkong Club, which he ran with remarkable credit to himself and satisfaction to the members, with whom he was universally popular; and he has been so many years in the Far East that he is loth to leave if and has left here with the intention of settling down in Japan. A large number of his friends went off to the steamer this afternoon to wish him good-bye.

Some time ago a movement was set on foul

The results in the Standards, it must ever be remembered by Grantin-aid school managers, are the results for which the public money is devoted; and every subject over and above these fall peculiarly under the category of private enterprise. At present it can hardly be said that Hongkong possesses the proper materials for carrying out any large system of secondary education but small beginnings lead to great things, and it may be so in this matter. Some concessions, we understand, may be made by the Syndicate of the Cambridge University to meet the peculiar circumstances of Hongkong. It may not, for instance, be possible to present as many as twenty-five candidates at first, as required by the rules; while the rule as to the age of Chinese youths engaged in atudies such as those laid down may be modified to meet local requirements. Were Chiness to take the place of Greek, the chances of native youths would be proportionately improved by the change. These and other suggestions will doubtless be carefully considered by the Cambridge Syndicate; and there can be no question but that the formation of Hongkong as a centre will lead to good results. Boscon. April 10th. - The mutiny which resulted in the burning of the Boston, ship Frank N. Seven of the cr. w of the ship resched this city yesterday from St. Helena. names are : Wm. St. Clair, of San Francisco; August Knefer of Germany, John Kinman and Robert Sanborn of Sweden. Louis Anson, H. Wilson and C. Hendrickson of Norway. They state that Captain Clarke and Mate Holmes were very abasive, and that was the undoubted cause of the mutiny. It was a common thing to hear the noise of beating and clubbing the sailors in the night, and this accounts for no notice being taken of the mutiny in which two men only were concerned until they had secured possession of the ship, which they held for more than twenty-four hours. The two Manila mon who committed the murdors were frequently beaten, and it was the outrageous tyranny inflicted on them which led to the mutiny. The men gave detailed accounts of their brutal treatment and also a story of the mutiny similar to that which has already been printed.

COUHIN CHINA.

We recently called attention to the oppressive manner in which the French Government of Cochin China had been putting into force the rigorous laws it has framed for the suppression of opium smug- administration, the snugglers slone would gling; and we pointed out how prejudicial to commercial enterprise and even to the welfare of the country itself, was the great risk of serious loss and detention to which it thus subjected merchant vessels on board of which Chinese servants might attempt to smuggle opium. The reality of this obatruction to commerce was enforced by the statement of facts with regard to the soizure and detention of the steamers Lennox, Decima and Carisbrooke. Our remarks have called forth rather strong comment from the leading French paper in Cochin China, La Saigonnais; and in order to let the public know what the French have got to say in justification of their high-handed policy, we give a translation of the article

OLADSTONE'S HOME RULE SCHEME.

New York. April 10 .- The Times' London cable of the 9th says: Twenty-four hours' reflection and consultation have tended to confirm the belief that Gladat ne's speech has gone far to unite the English Radicals on his Irish programme but it has also been made clear that the Whig revolt is more serious than has latterly been believed. So far as popular indications go, they are with Gladstone. The provincial Liberal papers, as a whole, accept the scheme with fewer protests and reservations than were expected. Of course. the London press is dead against it. Of thirteen dailies here, only the News approves of the bill. The comments of the others range from the violent anathemus of the Times to the conceited patronage of the Pull Mall Gazette. All are hostile. The absorbing topic is the flage of Chamberlain's speech. He was less fluent than usual, and the thin flippancy of his manner, doubly n table in contrast to the deep. almost devotional carnestness of Gladstone. induced a critical spirit in his auditors. His brief passage at arms with Glailstone over his letter discone rted him, and when he developed his own childish scheme for a national council the thing was met with such honest derision on both sides of the House that all chance of an effective speech was lost. When he sat down only the Tories set up a perfunctory little cheer. Chamberlain stock, which has been declining since February, has to-night gone out of reach. The Marquis of Hartington, on the contrary, made a strong, tomperate, weighty speech, probably the best of his life, and the Irish are afraid of its effect on the wavering minds of both parties. It is understood to-night that the Marquis of Salisbury has ancoceded in whipping in almost all the mutinous Tories. It is also regarded as probable now that not more than three or four will vote for the bill. although some others may absent them-

The general rebellion of the Scotch Liberal press has increased the nervousness about the Scotch vote, which has been doubtful for weeks back, but the reception given the Ulster Presbyterian delegation by the Scotch members the other day was so critical in tone that there is still room for hope that they will content themselves with amending the bill in committee. London, April 9 .- The House of Commons was again crowded this evening. Chamberlain had four principal objections to the scheme for the government of Ireland. The first was the proposal to exclude Irish members from Westminster. The second was to renouncing, as proposed, the exercise of the right of imperial tax ition. In the third place he objected to the surrender of the appointments of Judges and magistrates, and finally he objected to the supreme authority given to the Irish Parlin ment in matters not especially excluded from its authority. He further object to any scheme that laid upon the British taxpayer a tremendous liability, with excessive risk, as such a project could only be looked upon as a bribe to modify the hostility of the Irish landowners to home rule. He did not believe that the Irish people would agree to be deprived of all voice in the control of matters and policies in which they were deeply int-rested, and he asserted that Ireland was being asked to occupy degrading position, which her people would never accept

The financial question, he continued, divided itself into two parts. The speech received deafening cheers.

New York, April 11. - Justin McCarthy in a cable letter to the Herald says : 'The present home-rule scheme will probably not pass, but will get through the House of Commons, very likely, by a small majority, after long delay and much putting about in committees. The session will then be far advanced, and the Lords will, of course, throw out the measure. Probably Gladstone will et his enemies do the best thoy can. enemies will try to form a coalition Ministry, and will fail. [Cheers.] The speaker then went on to analyze the receipts and disbursements of an imaginary Irish budget, for the purpose, as he said, of showing that Gladstone's proposal to maintain the fiscal unity for the empire, while giving Ireland home rule, was altogether untrustworthy. He then pointed out that the amount which the Premier had named as that which Ireland | waiian islands and China will facilitate would every year contribute under home rule to the imperial Treasury as a contribution for the benefit of imperial unity was of an extremely illusionary and precarious character. MR GLADSTONE'S HOME RULE SCHEME.

The London Daily News gives an accuposition of this scheme he took ou rate though brief summary of Mr Gladstone's speech propounding his Irish scheme and a lively description of the appearance of the House during its delivery:---

Mr Gladstone's disclosure of what was in the palm of the old Parliamentary hand. when made at last, was made with a promptitude which Ministers are not often permitted to show in the House of Commons. But this was an occasion on which the House had no patience with preliminaries. The Prime Minister arrived at half-past four. A House filled as this House never was filled before greeted his business-like advance with a hearty welcome. Not only were the customary cheers accorded him. but from the benches belong the gangway on both sides of the House, Radicals and Parnellites rose to their feet to give their lungs more play and to wave their hats in the full tide of their enthusiasm. Only a minute or two more had passed before the object of this splendid demonstration was at the table opening out his scheme for the future government of Ireland. The House had been in the course of formation almost from the dawn of day, and new it was packed in every corner. A novel expedient, too, had been adopted to meet the unusual domand for places. By means of chairs, new cross benches were improvised and made to extend up the floor of the House as far as the gangway, leaving the narrowest possible aisle for the entrance and exit of members. This contrivance marred the ceramony of the introduction of three new members, whose sponsors were unable to advance with them in the stately manner prescribed by custom. On the other hand. it gave a kindly and effective prominence to Sir R. Fowler when he presented to the imposing sheet containing the protest of there was no half-way house between entire that the doctors in our district distributed House from the foremost row of chairs the merchants, bankers, and other electors of the City of London' against any proposal for a Legislature in Dublin. Petitions to a similar effect, by the way, were presented from Ireland by Major Saunderson, amid the ironical cheers of a band of Parnellites, who had made a raid on the bench where he sat, without, however, succeeding in ousting the Ulster member. The gangways were fully occupied, and it might have been noted that Viscount Cranborne on the lowest step on the one side of the House had for his vis-a-vis on the other Mr Joseph Arch. As for the steps of the Chair. they were crowded up to the Speaker's shining shoebuckles. Among the incidents of the assembling was the appearance of Mr Bright, which was recognised with an unmistakable cordiality. Cheers also greeted Mr John Morley on his arrival, and Mr Goschen had a reception in which cheers from the Opposition and ironical laughter from the Parnellites were mingled The Marquis of Hartington, Sir H. James, Mr Chamberlain, and Sir C. Dilke sat side by side behind Ministers. In the crowded galleries the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert Victor, Prince Christian, the Duke of Cambridge, the Marquis of Ripon, Earl Spencer, Lord Ashbourne, the French Ambassador, and Arhdescon Farrar had prominent places; while in the seats underneath the gallery were to be seen sitting side by side such diverse personages as
